

Name and position today and a short background

Professor Hans-Günter Heimbrock

Professor in Practical Theology and Religious Education at Goethe-University Frankfurt, Germany. Main research issues are oriented to contextual and empirical theology. Besides I am engaged in homiletics and liturgics as well as in Religious Education. In recent years I have developed an empirical-theological approach based on life-world and phenomenological philosophy.

Member of several scientific societies, among others:

The Royal Norwegian Society of Sciences and Letters, Wissenschaftliche Gesellschaft für Theologie, The International Seminar on RE and Values (ISREV), The International Academy of Practical Theology, The International Society of Empirical Research in Theology (ISERT), The European Network on Religious Education in a Contextual Approach (ENRECA).

Based on European university exchange program I am frequently giving classes and lectures within the phd programs in Norway, Sweden, Switzerland, the Netherlands, and Estonia.

Outside Europe I am lecturing in practical theology at Boston University, School of Theology.

Short CV

After studies in theology and teacher education I took my dr. paed. 1976 on a thesis about the dialogue between theology and psychoanalysis about phantasy. I did my habilitation in theology 1980 on the history of the psychology of religion. 1987 I was appointed for the chair of psychology of religion in the theological faculty at Groningen University (The Netherlands). Since 1990 I am holding a chair for Practical Theology and Religious Education in the Faculty of Protestant Theology in Frankfurt.

Research and interest fields
